Legal deposit is a statutory obligation which requires that any organisation, commercial or public, and any individual producing any type of documentation in multiple copies, be obliged to deposit one or more copies with a recognised national institution.

Purpose

- Ensures comprehensive collection of a nation’s documentary heritage
- Comprehensive, standardised cataloguing and recording of publications
- Supports preservation – long term survival of documentary heritage
- Fundamental to freedom of information and supports informed citizenry

* AV material = audio-visual (e.g. CDs, DVDs, cassettes, films, multimedia kits, computer disks)
 born-digital = documents created and designed to be read in electronic form
 legal deposit encouraged by the ACT Heritage Library but not legislated ^ NSW is seeking legislative reform to expand legal deposit to digital publications
^^ In early 2019, the Libraries Board of South Australia will authorise publishers to deposit electronic material where the material is of a kind that is capable of being deposited through the NED Deposit Processes
^^^ Legislation in Western Australia will be extended to include born digital material in early 2019 to create a single, sustainable service platform to enable Australia's legal deposit libraries to build a national collection of digital publications so that Australians can understand their diverse social, cultural and intellectual histories, now and in the future.

By 2020, all stakeholders will regard the service as trustworthy, efficient, successful and as a central pillar of NSLA's ongoing and collaborative commitment to collect, preserve, and - within the bounds of the Copyright Act - make accessible the Australian imprint, in physical or digital form.

What is NED

- The National edeposit (NED) service is an initiative of Australia’s nine national, state and territory libraries
- NED will enable the deposit, management, preservation, discovery and delivery of Australia’s digital legal deposit publications
- Currently in its final development phase, NED will launch in 2019
NATIONAL EDEPOSIT (NED)
Deposit Portal Beta Site

National edeposit is designed for publishers...

Did you know that under the Copyright Act 1968 publishers have an obligation to lodge their works with certain National, State and Territory libraries? The National edeposit service provides publishers with:

Audience reach
- Reach a wider audience with your edeposits through discovery services including Google, Trove and National, State and Territory library catalogues
- Delivery of your edeposits to a wide range of digital devices

Access control
- Control where and when your edeposits may be viewed and reused by others
- Set conditions for access and reuse of your edeposits ranging from open use through to restricted access

Preservation
- Your edeposits will be digitally preserved for the community and future generations to become an important part of Australia’s memory
- Your intellectual property and commercial interests are protected when you deposit with the National edeposit service

Notes:

Access conditions do not prevail over the Copyright Act 1968 or relevant jurisdictional legislation.

'Applicable' state or territory library means those libraries whose legal deposit legislation applies to the content in question.

In some circumstances, there may be more than one applicable state or territory library, e.g. South Australian legislation provides for material 'of particular relevance to the State' to be deposited.

Regardless of access conditions, fair dealing provisions under the Copyright Act 1968 still apply.

Next Steps

• Finalising the technical development of the system
• Training for staff in the member libraries, development of procedures and workflows
• Communication with publishers
• Migration of existing electronic legal deposit collections into NED
• Launch of NED
• Planning for enhancements and new functionality
