Since May 2016, Jarrod A. Clabaugh, CAE has served as the president and CEO of the the Ohio Society of Association Executives (OSAE), which was formed in 1938 to foster excellence, leadership and professionalism in association management. In November 2016, the organization formed the OSAE Foundation, which Clabaugh also oversees. In these roles, Clabaugh works to provide a variety of services and benefits to Ohio’s association community that enhance its professional growth, development and economic force. Clabaugh served on OSAE’s board of directors from 2013-2015.

Prior to serving in this role, Clabaugh was the chief communications officer of Clemons & Associates, Inc., an association management company located in Baltimore, Maryland. He served as the director of communications for the Ohio Restaurant Association for nearly five years before joining Clemons & Associates. The restaurant association serves as the leading voice for Ohio’s foodservice industry, and Clabaugh served as the organization's spokesperson on leading issues and matters that impacted the cornerstone of most Ohio communities.

Clabaugh also possesses experience in the for-profit sector, working for businesses in the real estate, automotive, healthcare and pharmaceutical segments. In addition to being a graduate of Ohio University's E.W. Scripps School of Journalism, Clabaugh also possesses a Bachelor of Arts in French. Clabaugh is also a member of the American Society of Association Executives (ASAE), the Association Societies Alliance (ASA) and Kiwanis Club of Hilliard, Ohio.
