2019 Cardiac Nursing Symposium

Barbara MacArthur, RN, MN, FAAN
VP Cardiac Services
October 17, 2019
At the end of today, you will not be who you were before…

Tell me and I forget, teach me and I may remember, involve me and I learn.

--Benjamin Franklin
I know you are involved…

- In Professional Development
- In Life-Long Learning
- In Personal Development
- In the Involvement of Others
All we do is based on the assumption that human caring makes a difference in the health of individuals and societies.
Who are we and what do we do?

Roy Jacques, organizational psychologist was asked..

“What activities of nurses could not be done by members of another occupation without recreating something like a nurse?”
“Nursing’s distinctive competency, the one to all appearances necessary for the functioning of the organization, is that the nurse is the one person on the unit whose job is to care about anything that might happen in the universe of the patient and to connect any parties who need to be connected in order to assure a successful outcome for the patient.”