Pharma and Biotech IP USA postponed to 2021

The Pharma and Biotech IP USA team and I would like to thank you for your continued patience while we have been assessing developments surrounding the covid-19 pandemic, and its impact on the ability to safely hold international events for our clients and staff. The repercussions of coronavirus have been felt worldwide, with most major economies going into lockdown during the course of this year. With the resulting changes to everyday work habits, as well as operating procedures at major IP offices and courts, IP owners are being compelled to find new ways of interacting.

With uncertainty remaining around travel plans and social distancing in the immediate future, IAM has taken the difficult decision to cancel Pharma and Biotech IP USA in 2020. Our commitment to the IP community remains undiminished and we will be refocusing our efforts to ensure our own contribution to its post-crisis recovery.

Additionally, we are very pleased to announce that our brand new virtual event, IPBC Connect, will be held throughout September 2020. Comprised of multiple short and manageable sections across the month, IPBC Connect will allow attendees to build their own agenda via a series of interactive sessions, designed to facilitate discussion, benchmarking and the sharing of best practice in key areas of strategic IP value creation. You can get more details about IPBC Connect here.

The continuing ethos of IAM is to maintain the highest standard of delivery and content in order to ensure a unique learning and networking experience that surpasses delegate expectations. We remain absolutely committed to this – both now, and post covid-19.

If you have any further questions please don't hesitate to ask, otherwise best wishes, and we look forward to seeing you next year.

Kind Regards

John Eborall
